

TEN NEW SCHOOLHOUSES AUTHORIZED THIS YEAR

Mortons Gap Gets Appropriation of $2,000,
Which People Will Supplement

PLAN TO HAVE A BUILDING THAT WILL DO TOWN CREDIT

Contracts to be Let for Three New Buildings and Sewer Painting Job

Including the proposed new school building at Mortons Gap, for which the plans have not yet been definitely drawn, and the new buildings for White Plains, Silent Run and Ferguson sub-districts, authorized to be contracted for at the meeting of the County Board of Education held on Monday, the County Board has this year authorized the building of ten new schoolhouses. Contracts have been let for all but the four buildings just mentioned and the work of construction has been under way now for several weeks past. The buildings now in work will be finished, with exception of perhaps one, by July 1, so the country schools may begin at that time as usual.

One of the most important things the County Board has done in the matter of providing school houses for the children of the county, is the appropriation on Monday of $2,000 towards the erection of a suitable school building in the busy town of Mortons Gap. The people of Mortons Gap have shown a lively interest in the future of their school and the proper education of their children, and propose to supplement substantially by private subscription the appropriation made by the County Board, so that they may be able to build a house somewhat in keeping with the importance of their town and the needs of a growing community. There are now about two hundred children of school age in the district and the town is growing. That community, too, is one of the most important taxpaying communities in the county, having much valuable mining and railroad property within its bounds. The purpose is to build a two story house with the upper story unfinished perhaps, except for the floor; three rooms with the cloak rooms and hall on the first floor, after the plan of the Earlinton Graded School building. The committee which presented the matter to the County Board was composed of F. B. Harris, Dr. E. T. Allmon and J. H. Jones, trustee. Dr. Allmon and Mr. Jones were heard by the board a month ago. On Monday Mr. Jones and Mr. Harris presented the matter for final consideration.

The question of site for new schoolhouse at White Plains was settled by accepting the acre of ground offered by Dr. Bailey, which he agreed to sell for $100 cash. Trustee Harrison was made happy by the settlement of this question and the order to build a new school house there. New desks were ordered furnished Oglesby school.

A new site was bargained for in the Ferguson district, by trade with Dick Ferguson of the old site, across from Mr. Ferguson's place. The new site is also to get the old school building, located near his home, and in exchange for this will furnish the rough lumber needed to build a new house on the new site, about one-half mile distant, which was approved as a much better location for the school.

In the light of the construction of the law by the county attorney and other lawyers, the County Board voted that the original order, drawn in accordance with the law, should stand, authorizing the collection of school poll tax from every male citizen over twenty-one years of age. The question arose after statement made by the sheriff that he found numerous men, who had been exempt from paying the county poll tax, were making serious objection to paying the eighty cents school poll tax which they are required to pay under the law. Legal opinion agreed that the school tax is a state affair and that neither the County Board of Education nor the Fiscal Court has authority to make any exceptions in its enforcement.

Goodness schoolhouse is to be weatherboarded and this house, Concord, Leach and Sons Fide are to be painted. Contracts for painting the new school house ordered at this meeting will also be let on the usual plan of so much per square for the labor, independent of the builder's contract.

Under the law the board is required to elect one of its members to be a member of the County Text Book Commission, and Paul M. Moore was elected to that place. Next meeting of the County Board will be on Monday, July 11. Requests for bids on new houses will presently be sent out by the building committee, together with specifications.

CALDWELL COUNTY FARMER SHOT

Father Who Was Expected to Give Important Evidence, is Shot Down.

Princeton, Ky., June 10.—Jude Robinson, a farm hand on the farm of George Goodman, and one of the most important witnesses in the night rider trials at Hopkinsville, was shot down and slain from ambush yesterday in the vicinity of Oster Day, in this county. There is no clue to the identity of the assassin.

As soon as it became known that Robinson was to be summoned as a witness in the Hopkinsville trials he received a warning to leave the county. He refused to pay any attention to the notice, however, and his assassination followed.

He leaves a wife and two children.

May Have Been Murder Victim.

Paducah, Ky., June 14.—John Maeschlein, alias Hiale, alias Farrell, who ran a gasoline launch between Paducah and Illinois, disappeared April 9, the day before the Pool road murder here. WHO FIRST SHOOK HANDS?

Who first shook hands?

In what pale dawn
Were hearts of men together drawn
Until some impulse led unto
The clasp of palms? Ah, when those two
Stood thus, with hand enclosed in hand,
A new light seemed to flood the land—
The light of friendship burst forth then,
To brighten the drear path of men.

Who first shook hands?

What low-browed wight
Stretched forth a hairy paw of night
And gripped a shrinking comrade fast,
And, putting forth his strength so vast,
Crushed bone and muscle, sans remorse—
Then, with a vacant look, and hoarse,
Passed on and left his victim there,
Breathing a lengthy, fervent prayer,
Consigning to sulphuric lands
The troglodyte who first shook hands.

WILL FOUND HOME FOR WORNOUT NEWSPAPER MEN

J. Craig Smith, Youngstown, Ohio, Capitalist, Plans Retreat for Writers of Pen.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 12.—J. Craig Smith, a capitalist of Youngstown, announced today that he is planning with a wealthy widow philanthropist of St. Louis, whose name he is not at liberty to make public, to establish a home for newspaper men on the Mississippi River, fourteen miles north of St. Louis.

Mr. Smith has just returned from Missouri, where he is interested extensively in mining enterprises. He has selected a farm of 160 acres, he says, for the home. He said it was not his plan to make a sanitarium of the place for the treatment of ill newspaper men, but a place of rest for tired and worn out men connected with the editorial staffs of newspapers.

Mr. Smith will return to Missouri in a short time to complete details of the proposed home. He expects to have it open by fall. It is planned to conduct the institution in the same manner that the Actor's Home is managed.

SPEAKS SIXTEEN TONGUES BUT DOES NOT KNOW NAME

Queer Prisoner Before the Judge in New York City.

New York, June 11.—Attaches of the Court of General Sessions are still talking about a unique prisoner who appeared there yesterday. He did not know his birthplace, age or name, and he could neither read nor write, but he spoke fluently in sixteen languages, and was partly master of a dozen more.

"I don't remember my parents," he told the Judge, "but I have heard they moved to Gibraltar when I was a baby. I shipped from Gibraltar before the mast when I was about ten years old, as nearly as I can guess, and I have been knocking about the world ever since. In that way I picked up a score or so of languages. I've been mostly known by nicknames, and since I landed here five years ago they have called me 'Baby Moore.' Moore is charged with assault on an officer. He pleaded not guilty. The interpreter tried him in eight languages and got answers in each.

"And now, Judge," the interpreter complained, "he's talking in tongues I never heard of."

Eddyville, Ky., June 12.—Milton Oliver, wife, son and daughter passed through here this afternoon on their way from Hopkinsville, where Oliver had been summoned as a witness in the alleged night rider indictments against Dr. Amos and others, the cases being continued to September. Maj. Bassett and a detachment of seven men from the Hopkinsville militia came here with the Oliver family and guarded Oliver to his home near Lamasco, this county. It is said that the state soldiers will remain with Mr. Oliver indefinitely to protect him from further violence. He is able to hobble around on crutches, although he is still weak from the wound received some time ago. The detachment is mounted.

Versailles, Ky., June 13.—Daniel M. Mr. Bowman has received acceptances from over seventy newspapers that will be represented by more than one hundred editors. Mr. Bowman says there will be at least fifty other "delegates," and that the "press gang" at Middlesboro next week will easily number more than two hundred.

The Middlesboro committee on arrangement and entertainment are making preparations on a lavish scale and say the crowd, however large, won't be too big for Middlesboro hospitality. There has never been a program more crowded with social features.

Butter Scotch Pie

This recipe for butter scotch pie will be found to be excellent. Line a deep pie pan with a rich pie paste and bake. Then use this filling: One cup of brown sugar, one and a half large teaspoonfuls of flour, one cup of water, the yolks of two eggs, a lump of butter the size of an egg and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook this mixture until it thickens and then pour it into the baked crust. The beaten whites of the two eggs, to which has been added one teaspoonful of sugar, should be put on top and then browned in the oven.

THOUSANDS GOING TO SEE AEROPLANES

Glenn H. Curtiss, the World's Greatest Birdman, to be at Aviation Meet.

REDUCED RAILROAD RATES FOR THIS OCCASION.

First Aerial Event in State's History.

Nothing that has taken place in Kentucky in recent years has aroused near the interest that is being manifested in The Times' Aviation Meet that is to be held in Louisville at Churchill Downs on June 18 and 19, and recent achievements in aeronautics have served to create an intense desire on the part of every person, both old and young, to see aeroplanes in action.

The recent remarkable flight of Glenn H. Curtiss, who flew 150 miles from Albany to New York, and the previous performance of Louis Paulhan, the Freuchman, who flew from London to Manchester, in England, are still fresh in the public mind, and as Curtiss heads a team of aviators to appear at The Times' Meet, thousands will journey from all parts of the State to see this wonderful birdman duplicate some of his remarkable feats.

Besides Curtiss will be Charles K. Hamilton, who has entered for the $50,000 prize flight from New York to Chicago; C. J. ("Bud") Mars, who also will try for this handsome purse; Horace B. Wild, who is to essay a flight from Chicago to Louisville by aeroplane, and Capt. Bates, who is also a daring sky-pilot.

Every railroad in Kentucky and Southern Indiana has made reduced rates for the two days of the meet, and tickets will be good returning on the Monday following. In addition many railroads will run special excursion trains to Louisville for this occasion, on which the fares will be remarkably low. Every indication, say railroad officials, is for the largest crowds on June 18 and 19 that have ever come to that city.

The aviators obtained by The Times have already proved their mettle, and the meet promises in every way to outstrip any other given in the United States. The Times is spending thousands of dollars to bring these birdmen to Louisville and the enterprise doubtless will prove attractive to thousands of persons all over the State, few of whom have ever seen an aeroplane in action. Thus its educational value will make it well worth the time of everybody, who wishes to keep abreast of the times.

Miss Jessie Maddox has returned home after an extended visit to her aunt, Mrs. L. C. Brown.

Messrs. Ordway Frank Cain and Walton Davis will attend the opening ball at Sebree Springs tonight.

The members of the Ladies' Aid of the Baptist church are to be congratulated upon the work they are doing and the marked improvement already made on the church.

"Tis June, the month when eyes look love to eyes that speak, said so sure, young people, that you do not confuse the looks and thus deprive us of the merry sound of wedding bells.

L. C. Brown and family are leaving our town today. Mr. Brown will go to their new home at Drakesboro, Ky. Mrs. Brown and children, after a visit to relatives at Hanson, will join Mr. Brown at Drakesboro. The people of our town regret exceedingly to lose this excellent family.

The citizens of Mortons Gap are proud to learn that the County Board has donated $2,000 for a new school building at this place. The people of the district united to add an amount sufficient to erect a building that will be a credit to the town. A meeting of the citizens is called for Thursday night to take some action in the matter.

Easy Method of Killing Felon.
For a felon take common rock salt, as used for salting down pork or beef, dry in an oven, then pound it fine and mix with spirits of turpentine in equal parts, put it in a rag and wrap it around the parts affected. As it gets dry put on more, and in 24 hours you are cured, says a writer. The felon will be dead.

Off the Banks

By Charles Daly Douglas

Perhaps the saddest reminiscence of my varied life is connected with a fishing excursion off the Newfoundland banks. I owned a yacht, and as soon as I proposed the trip to my friends, I had no difficulty in finding plenty who were willing and anxious to accompany me. I chose a round dozen choice spirits, who I knew had the necessary qualifications to make such an excursion pleasant. A happier party never set sail from any port than the yacht carried on this occasion. Singing, music, story-telling, and playing filled up the hours, and when we met around the wellspread table the hilarity was renewed. We had rather a disagreeable passage to the banks, with frequent rains and smart gales, but our skipper and crew were perfectly reliable, and we had no little apprehension of disaster as of any other misfortune.

The winds at last lulled, the sea grew tranquil, and the captain reported that we should be off the fishing grounds the next morning. I well remember the unbounded mirth and fun of that night. We got out our tackle and overhauled it in order to be fully ready for the sport; and when that was done, with the crossfire of jokes and quips that accompanied it, we made merry with song, story and other cheer till far into the morning. When we went to sleep it was with the highest anticipations of the coming sport.

"Good weather, I hope, captain?" was the cry that saluted the latter as he appeared at the breakfast table next morning.

"I'm afraid I can't say much for the weather at present," was the reply. "We ran into a fogbank about daylight and we don't seem likely to get out of it till the weather clears. A fog is about the last thing I expected to find about the last thing I expected to find up here at this season of the year; but here we are, right in it. I hope it'll clear, however, during the morning."

Somewhat disappointed at this intelligence, we ate but little, and then went on deck. I thought I had never fogs before in different quarters of the world, but never had I witnessed anything like this. The air was cold, raw, and heavy with moisture, and the fog so dense that we could hardly see the length of the yacht. A servant was sent below for shawls and cloaks, and we sat aft, shivering in our wraps, and feeling as gloomy as was natural under the circumstances. One of us produced some cigars, which were passed around and lighted, and under the influence of the weed, we grew more companionable, and even began to propose small bets as to the hour the unwelcome fog would lift.

The captain now came aft, and asked me if there was anything like a fogbank among the rubbish in the forward hold. I told him there was one. I remembered one foggy night in the Grecian Archipelago when it sounded drearily all night over my head, and prevented my sleeping. I told him that the company the next morning had voted the thing a nuisance, and directed it to be taken down. I believe it had never been hung since.

"We'll have it put on and set it going at once," said the captain, as he turned away. "It is probably an over-precipitation, as we are far out of the steam-track, and there's not wind enough to give headway to anything with sails. But we'll set the thing going, for perfect safety. Ho, there, forward! Hoist up the big bell from the hold, and hang it on that fixture by the mast."

The great, high bow of one of the ocean steamers appeared as suddenly as though she had risen from the sea, or descended from the skies, and struck us amidships with a crash that left the little yacht completely in twain.

The two halves of the lifted vessel rose up for air, and she settled amidships.

I heard a shriek—a prolonged cry of horror and despair, mingled with the rush of the water and the puffing of smoke as the steamer's engine was reversed. I was conscious of a tremendous shock, a blow, and a great black mass gliding above me, and I was conscious of nothing further until I woke to life in the saloon of the steamer, lying on a sofa, with a crowd of sympathetic gentlemen and ladies about me, applying restoratives and chafing my hands.

Except a few bruises I was not injured in body, and was waiting the deck of the steamer soon after, with such mingled feelings of thankfulness for my own escape, and bitter grief for the fate of my poor companions, as no words of mine can describe.

I have been awakened in the dead of night from a peaceful slumber to find the roof over our heads blazing in a sheet of flame; I have been hurled with a train of cars down a steep embankment when traveling at a rate of 40 miles per hour; I have been deliberately shot at in the street by a maniac, the hall grating my cheek; but nothing has ever happened to me that seemed to fall so suddenly, so mysteriously, like the swift hand of doom itself, as that dreadful tragedy off the Newfoundland banks.

The miracle of the pipping chick is now being enacted in many an incubator.

The Mule's Intelligence.
"Dat ol' mule knows dis plowin' time has come," said Brother Dickey. "When I gone ter der barn ter feed him dis mawlin' he had done kicked de do' loose. Jumped two wite fences an' swimmid de tall pond ter de big woods. When you stops ter consider de few advantages de mule has had de intelligence er more man cant' hol' half a candle ter him."—Atlanta Constitution.

Just So.
"It took me three weeks," said the traveling salesman, "to get an audience with the king. But it was worth the trouble. He conferred a decoration upon me." "Booked an order, did you?"—Washington Herald.

MINING NOTES.

S. H. Kinnell spent Sunday in Henderson visiting relatives.

Thos. O. Long made a business trip to Henderson Tuesday.

Business was good last week and only a shortage of coal cars kept the mines from working regularly.

Messrs. Kinnell, Newbold and Brasher, of the civil engineer force, were at the Shamrock mines Tuesday on business with that department.

Inertia of the Nerve.
The researches and experiments of a French scientist have led him to the conclusion that the cerebral nervous system is incapable of perceiving more than an average of ten separate impressions per second. After each excitation of the nerves a period of inertia follows, lasting about one-tenth of a second, and during this period a new impression cannot be made. According to the lay statistics of this scientist's person cannot make more than ten, or at the most a dozen, separate voluntary movements of any kind in a second, although the muscles, independently of the will, are capable of making as many as 30 or 40.

He Had a Choice of Churches.
A young man who travels in the west for a local manufacturing firm was telling his friends of his trip.

"Last Sunday I was in a little town that boasted one small hotel," he said, "and I asked the landlady where I could go to church."
"Well," he said, "I guess you want to know the different denominations. You can take your choice of what we got. We got a Reformed Presbyterian, an' we got a United Presbyterian an' we got another Presbyterian that ain't neither reformed or united."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

His Objection.
Carlyle's lecture, "Not on morality, but on cooking let us build our philosophy," is recalled by the following: "An aged aunt, though in the position of guest, protested against the appearance of a really noble rabbit pie on our nephew's breakfast table. It was at that she feared potatoes poisoning. Her objections were ethical. But, she declared with a wonderful aid-Victorianism, were 'such immoral animals'."

Must Deliver the Goods.
"Statesmanship has its cares," said one eminent citizen.
"Yes," replied the other, "when a statesman travels, he has to get up speeches for the people to read, instead of merely sending home post cards."

He Heard it.
"Has your neighbor an ear for music?" "You'd think so if you could hear the coal and clods of dirt rattle against our house when my daughter starts her early morning practice."

Sex inequality.
It doesn't cost much to get a man ready to be married. He buys a new suit of clothes, two suits of underwear, three extra pairs of socks, has his hair cut, and is ready. But think of the stuff a girl thinks she must buy when she gets married! Are girls so superior to men that they cannot get married without fifteen or twenty times more clothes?—Atchison Globe.

The Boss of the Place.
"Yes," said the determined man, when that waiter resumed the smallest of my tip I took the case to the proprietor of the restaurant."
"He gave the waiter some money out of his own pocket and apologized to him for having such a customer."

London's Wheeled Vehicles.
At last accounts there were 15,834 licensed vehicles in London.

Killed by Curiosity.
There is an African insect, the larvae of which prey upon ants. The larvae puts its head into a small hole in the ground and quivers its tail quickly. The ants come near to examine the novel object, and are suddenly they are seized by the forcible or grasping with which the tail is furnished, and thus are killed. Not only do insects and the lower animals understand that the curiosity of their victims may be employed as a snare for them, but human beings understand and act upon the same principle. Many young men and young women have been ruined by adopting the apparently harmless course of "going to see what it was like."

Voting in France and Germany.
In France the voter carries the voting paper with him into the polling place, and it is strictly illegal. He hands it folded to the presiding officer, who deposits it in the ballot box. A similar system is in force in Austria, and in the elections for the German imperial parliament.

Authority.
"Miss Blanks is not a bit vain about her beauty, though she has every reason to be," said Mr. Sparks. "I know it, because she told me an herself."

FIRE SWEEPS OVER HEART OF SEATTLE

TWENTY-THREE DEAD AND AREA
THREE BLOCKS LONG LAD WASTE.

FIRE ENGINE ABANDONED

Ledgers in One District Caught and Have No Time to Escape—
Loss Estimated at a Million Dollars.

Seattle, Wash., June 11.—Twenty-three persons and property valued at nearly $1,000,000 were destroyed by a fire which broke out in the heart of the city.

Twenty of those captured dead were killed when the fire destroyed ledgers housed near the Garbaird warehouses. A policeman was seen through the flames just after the fire started, and that there was no time for the ledgers in that section of the burned area to escape.

The fire has swept an area three blocks long and two blocks wide and threatened a large district of wooden buildings.

The Pacific hotel at Vine and First streets was in danger. All the employees in the city were pressed into service and patients were removed to the city hospital, a mile away, from the danger zone.

A fire engine caught in the path of the flames was abandoned by its crew.

Three men were hurt in a building at First and Wall street. The loss was so intense that it was impossible to get within a block of the fire.

Stage Foundation Finds Many Families Living on That Amount
Daily in St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 11.—Hundreds of wage earners in St. Louis have less than 20 cents daily to spend for food, while the women and children, including many of those who work, are forced to live on even smaller sums. These facts are established by the Stage Foundation report, which was gathered by workers of the St. Louis School of Social Economy and compiled by Prof. Rudolph Solomonsen, recently elected general secretary of the Associated Charities of Chattanooga, Tenn. The results of the investigation have just been announced.

The report shows that all families having annual incomes of less than $600 must face deficits varying from $12 to $12, after paying for the bare necessities of life, with a few cents added for "luxuries." The average man spent by one man for tobacco in a year is $9.50, and for beer and whisky $16.50. The family spends but $12 a year for amusement, while its bill for car fare is $30.

More than 400,000 second-hand books were distributed in St. Louis under the provisions of the Stage Foundation, but only 154 of these were kept in such shape that they could be used. Ninety-nine of these 154 families are supported by wage earners in manufacturing and mechanical work; ten by those in professional work; twenty by workers in domestic or personal service, and twenty-nine by workers in trade and transportation.

The Training of Simpkins

When Simpkins began calling at Paradise flat, which is the name Caroline and Edwina have given their girl bachelor apartment, his hostess agreed that he was rather a bore. But as time went on and he continued to come with marked regularity they both found him interesting, although they did not confide this fact to each other. On the contrary, they still spoke of him with good-natured derision and never for a moment owned that any elaboration of dress on the evenings he was expected had any connection with his visits.

There was something touching in the naive manner with which Simpkins considered them on many little social points. He admitted that he had never had the opportunity of learning much about the intricacies of good form until he had the advantage of their acquaintance. So they began to feel that he was their misnomer.

"What color do you think I wear with my new gray spring suit?" he asked one evening.

"A green one of a soft dull shade," suggested Edwina.

"I think a gray one, a little lighter than the suit, with a touch of red. It will be much smarter," said Caroline.

"Gray and red is so commonplace," said Edwina.

"I don't think so," declared Caroline firmly.

Simpkins, after returning that he would provide himself with neckties of both kinds, hastened to change the subject.

This difference of opinion was the beginning of many disagreements in the naive manner with which Simpkins considered them on many little social points. He admitted that he had never had the opportunity of learning much about the intricacies of good form until he had the advantage of their acquaintance. Going Home

Though the members of the Falloway family are deeply attached to one another, they have carried to the superlative degree the theory of letting one another alone. Their idea is that the only way to be truly happy is not to be perpetually demanding information as to one another's movements and plans. The result is that no Falloway knows at all about the other Falloways.

This was why Summer Falloway had sudden idea in the middle of a golf game. He had been west for two months on business and was breaking of the traveling habit by degrees. Instead of landing in Chicago at once and immersing himself in work inside of 15 minutes, after the habit of most men, he had dropped off his train when it neared his golf club because the day was fine.

The idea which had clutched him while he was playing golf that day was that probably his father and mother had arrived home from their winter in California and the family house was open again. The elder Falloways were due at just about this time. If so, it would be a joy to him instead of to the club, where he had lived while in town that winter.

His telephone number, he called, and the telephone number, after the usual delays was told cold-bloodedly, "a meat market that it was not the Falloway residence. To be sure it might have the old Falloway telephone number, but nevertheless it was interested only in chops and steaks. Dejected, Summer concluded that instead of going through the red tape of calling the information bureau he would save time by calling up the women, who he lived next door to the Falloway home.

When he got the Bremers there was nobody in but a foreign maid, who was not of comprehension. Relucting his inquiries to simple form, he learned from Freda that there were "people in the house next door," and sighed relievedly. It would be time to see his father and mother again after so many months, and it would be pleasant to have his own roof over his wandering head once more.

Then he finished his golf game, bed dinner with some friends, and, once more clutching his faithful suitcase, started for home.

There were no lights downstairs, but through the hall window on the second floor he could see the reflection from lights in the rear. Probably they were just beginning to get settled. Whistling he ran up the steps and tried his latchkey. The key turned, but the door was locked inside. That was odd, so early in the evening, too!

Then he rang the bell. There was no answer. Suddenly he comprehended. In everybody's absence, the house was living there and sacking the house! Anyhow, he was going to see what was going on inside. He remembered a certain basement window that could be opened. Crawling in and sprawling on the cool pile, he stumbled carefully up to the ground floor and stealthily the second.

The house seemed deserted and deadly still. But at the second floor landing he saw the light again, and on tiptoe he ventured toward it. The door of a bedroom was open, and he walked in. To all appearances he was in a bedroom. There were no rugs, curtains or trappings, and the white-capped nurse who arose in alarm from her chair by the bed added the crowning touch. She and Summer stared in astonishment at each other.

"What's happened?" he gasped.

"Nothing," said the nurse, a little creepily; "but scarlet fever is happening—didn't you know? What are you doing here?"

Then she told him the story. It seemed the Hopkinses on the other side of the Falloways from the Bremers had a relative who had come to visit them, bringing her little boy and the little boy had brought along a case of scarlet fever. The Hopkinses, possessing three small children on their own account, in their panic had begged from Summer's brother Fred, who was married and lived elsewhere, the temporary use of the vacant Falloway house for their afflicted relative. As the elder Falloways had decided to stay away another month, Fred had granted the Hopkinses' request. The scarlet fever boy, his mother and a nurse were occupying the quarantined Falloway home.

As it appeared, so did Summer. When he, after an agonized debate, talked with the nurse, he was, he learned that he was indeed at home and home to stay for quite a time, his remarks were vigorous and profuse.

At present he is still in quarantine, waiting to be hunted and released. Daily, over the telephone with his new number, he reproaches his charitable brother Fred, who has an abominable sense of humor and so is not soothed to talk to.

Turkish Women and the Veil.
Turkish women do not wear veils because of their religion, as many suppose. It is merely the survival of an old custom. When the Turks still lived in Tartary, before the time of Mohammed, it was the habit of the men to stand their women for wives as attracted them. This led to much fighting that about the second century after Christ the Turks came together and decided that henceforth the women should go veiled, and should not meet men, but should dwell in harems, as soon as they arrived at womanhood, which was at about 11 years of age.
